Doing Research on Study Away Sites
With the 2016-17 academic year study away application opening soon, we highly recommend that you to start doing your own research on the different study away site options and making academic plans for your study away semester or year. To start, please visit NYU Global Program’s website here. It is recommended that you pay attention to cost of living at the various sites to factor into your decision. Please find the cost of living information on this website. There will also be a study away website specially designed for Shanghai students coming online later in October. We will send you updates in the future Global Affairs newsletter.

NYU Shanghai Global Week, October 19 - 23

Curious about why, where, and how to study away? The first ever NYU Shanghai Global Week is coming to campus between October 19 and 23! During the Global Week, you will have the chance to attend study away info sessions and chat with Shanghai Global Affairs for your study away questions. Staff from NYU Abu Dhabi and NYU Washington DC will also be on campus during Global Week. Please stay tuned for more information!

Creating Your Global Story

Studying away offers you the opportunity to add a chapter to the “global story” you began writing when you chose to study at NYU Shanghai. NYU’s global network of study away sites offers a variety of opportunities for you to develop the qualities that enhance your appeal to graduate schools and future employers. Depending on the sites selected, students may have the opportunity to participate in internships, volunteer programs, leadership activities, or part-time work that engages with the local community and develops marketable skills. Make sure to participate in Career Development Center (CDC) career counseling sessions and workshops so that we can provide guidance in building your "global story" as you choose your study away site. While you are abroad, CDC will continue to help you to stay on track with your career goals through virtual career counseling appointments, webinars, and consistent email updates. Contact the Career Development Center at shanghai.careerdevelopment@nyu.edu if you have any questions or concerns.

Message from Health & Wellness

H & W will be running study away workshops in the Spring term to assist students with getting ready for the study away experience. For students who require specific medical support for ongoing illness, they should ensure the proposed site has suitable healthcare resources and that their medications are available.

NOTE: There is no expedited service, please start ASAP. For passport application instructions, please click here.

How to Renew a Passport?

- Chinese students can apply for a new passport by following the process above.

- International students should contact the consulate of their home country in Shanghai for information on passport renewal. For some nationalities, it's a long process which may take several months, so you are suggested to start it now rather than waiting until the last minute.

What Should Be Done after Obtaining or Renewing My Passport?

- Chinese students should register their new passport at the Student Mobility office, room 110.

International students are required to renew their residence permit within 10 days after getting their renewed passports according to the current Chinese Law. Please email shanghai.student-mobility@nyu.edu with the scanned copy of your new passport bio page. Student Mobility staff will help you renew your Chinese residence permit. If you are planning to renew your passport during winter break in your home country, you would need to use both your old and new passport to re-enter China and then renew your residence permit within 10 days of your entry.
All the best,
